

INABILITY TO ATTEND A COMPULSORY UNIT COMPONENT - GUIDELINES POLICY DDS

Part A - Dealing with Students unable to attend a compulsory unit component

(1) These guidelines are for academic staff dealing with students, who have been unable to attend a compulsory component of a unit.

Compulsory Attendance Requirements

(2) The Student Unit outline for the unit must state the dates and times of activities / items / tasks that are compulsory for students to attend, if they are to pass the unit.

(3) These may include tasks that are formally assessed, like class room quizzes, or practicals, and constitute a percentage of the marks for the unit.

(4) Alternatively, they may be activities that though not formally assessed, require student attendance, in order for the student to demonstrate that the learning outcomes of the unit have been achieved. These may be activities requiring participation (and therefore, attendance) at tutorials, or attendance at mandatory briefing sessions, for example, on OH&S, for a laboratory-based unit. A unit may have attendance requirements that require the student to attend most of the tutorials, expressed as a percentage, in order to pass the unit.

(5) Increasingly, the University is designing its teaching so as not to always require students to attend (e-learning, etc.). It is not reasonable for students to be expected to be forced to attend unit components unless they contribute to the learning outcomes of the unit.

Requests from students unable to attend compulsory unit components

(6) The normal expectation is that students attend compulsory components of units. Students are expected to manage the balance between their studies, and other activities (employment, family life etc.). Students may have compelling reasons for not being able to attend, but need to make the case to the unit co-ordinator.

(7) The assessment arrangements for units will vary (some will have very few compulsory attendance requirements, others may have academic reasons why attendance at tutorials is essential, etc.), so the unit-coordinator must determine how to respond to a request from a student that they are unable to attend.

(8) Repeated requests from students unable to attend may be a sign that the student is not able to cope with their studies, and may need to be advised about the assistance available from Student Support Services.

(9) All requests from students unable to attend a compulsory unit component must be in writing, to the unit co-ordinator. Students may provide documentary evidence to explain their situation, when explaining reasons for non-attendance.

(10) Unit Coordinators should not accommodate these requests if do so would confer a potential advantage to a student, over other students. This is an equity issue, and academic staff must be able to defend the judgements they make when making concessions to students unable to attend a compulsory unit component.

(11) Consistent with the Special Consideration Policy, the following factors will NOT be regarded as suitable grounds for justifying making concessions to students unable to attend a compulsory unit component:

- a. routine demands of employment and employment-related travel;
- b. difficulties adjusting to university life, to the self discipline needed to study effectively, and to the demands of academic work;
- c. stress or anxiety normally associated with examinations, required assessment tasks or any aspect of course work;
- d. routine financial support needs;
- e. lack of knowledge of requirements of academic work;
- f. difficulties with English language;
- g. difficulties with visa arrangements that could have been reasonably anticipated.
- h. scheduled anticipated changes of address, moving home, house moves etc.

(12) The following circumstances would not normally be regarded as grounds for having an application for an assignment extension granted:

- a. demands of sport, clubs, social or extra-curricular activity (other than to represent or participate in state, national or international sporting or cultural events);
- b. recreational travel (domestic or international);
- c. planned events, such as, weddings.

Determining Student Requests

(13) In considering student requests that they are unable to attend a compulsory unit component, staff are expected to take into account the following:

- a. The nature, timing and duration of the student's illness, misadventure, accident or extenuating circumstances and how this affected the student's capacity to attend.
- b. Would other students, faced with the same set of circumstances, be compromised in their capacity to attend? Or would better time management skills have allowed the problems to be foreseen and accommodated?
- c. The evidence the student provides to substantiate their application.

(14) The Unit Coordinator must make judgement as to whether or not the student's situation should be accommodated. See Outcomes, below.

Outcomes

(15) The unit coordinator will make a determination whether to:

- a. Take no action;
- b. set a different (but academically equivalent) task, which may be an assessment task;
- c. omit the assessment task from the final grade calculation.

(16) The Unit coordinator will provide the student with the outcome of their request via their UWS student email address, as soon as is practicable. The Unit Coordinator may contact the student to discuss the matter further, if necessary.

(17) The outcome of the application will be noted on the student's record in accordance with the School's procedures for recordkeeping.
